

Baby-proofing 101: Rhoost

Co-founders, Vianka Perez Belyea & Tavinder Phull

As home safety product designers, we have talked to many moms and dads about the importance of babyproofing. While all parents want to ensure the safety of their children, we have found that there are 3 types of parents:

1. The Uber-proofers: these parents would rather bubble wrap the entire house than risk exposure to even the slightest danger.
2. The Sensibles: these parents baby-proof because it's the right thing to do. While they don't go overboard, they get all the necessities for each room.
3. The Minimalists: these parents prefer to see how adventurous their children are and will seek out only those items they need.

However, whatever type you are, it's important to know some basic facts about the potential dangers in each room so you can make the best decision for your family and your home.

From the kitchen to the bedroom, each room poses some unique challenges - the graphic below highlights some of the challenges we hear from parents the most.

Our recommendation to parents figuring this out for the first time is:

Educate. Get informed about the potential dangers in your home.

Assess. Figure out what level of baby-proofing is necessary for your home and family.

Implement. Whether you engage a professional baby-proofer or do-it-yourself, there are a myriad of products out there to help ensure the safety of the children in your home!

We created Rhoost™ smarter childproofing solutions because we don't believe parents should have to compromise on their lifestyle in order to ensure safety in the home.

Some great resources to help you get started:

Safe Kids
safekids.org

The Home Safety Council
homesafetycouncil.org

The International Association for Child Safety
iafcs.org